There is no doubt that language is the road map of a culture. It certainly does tell you where its people come from and where they are going. However, there are some different points of view.

As far as I am concerned, language can show and tell you a lot about its people, their past, their present and about their culture.

Firstly, the way people talk, using their language, can show how educated and smart they are. Secondly, language can easily show history of culture, it can express all the beauty and greatness of culture.

One of the best examples is Russian language. Its word easily express the pain of all the wars and revolutions, showing us one of the greatest histories and cultures around the world, express all the beauty of poetic and imperial centuries. Continuing talking about Russian language, it is impossible to forget about its present and future. On the one hand, due to globalization more and more words are fulfilling it. More and more young people include English words in their speech, making it Russian, such as the word "fake" or more modern word "cringe".

In conclusion, language is one of the main ways to express ^{peoples!} ~~people's~~ cultures. Language ~~is one of the~~ is a map which could show past, present and future of its native speakers. d.d.b.
