Once Mahatma Gandhi said: "Be the change that you wish to see in this world"

I assume his quotation implies that without power of a single man, the world will not either move anywhere, or become a better place. And I do agree ~~this~~ with this. It is also a quite of a motivation for a man, who seeks for a motive but is scared to start.

Gandhi himself, during his lifetime work as a politician, proved the given statement. More than half a century ago, he liberated his homeland, knowing that without his help, nor the world itself or the Indian people would do something. There's always someone who pushes the world forward, making it a better place, like Gandhi did, and Elon Musk does now, engineering his "starships" and changing the world as he likes it to be.

If you have an ambition of changing the world, stop wasting your time and start creating. Without you your world will not move, ~~not~~ ~~evolution~~, nor ~~of~~ progress.
